Just got of the telephone with Omar. CD11 wasn't there because Trevor didn't invite them. He suggested the best way to fix that for the future is for you to say something informally to Trevor about how much we value CD11 & Omar being at our meetings.

Maybe it is small, but let's mind the details. We're entitled. Time to start a turn around on SWFM; Spring is almost here.

Another subject: does Christina know of our assessment of the "new guy"? What does she think? I asked him: is there any danger to losing Federal construction funds, which could endanger all of the planned LAX construction? After fumbling the question until Cyndi Hensch explained it to him, he said "Oh no." Yesterday's Kiplinger Newsletter: "The FAA's legal authority expires at the end of September 30. Without reauthorization, FAA couldn't collect taxes and other revenues. It also couldn't use money from a trust fund, potentially halting construction projects and disrupting flights." Such obliviousness leads me to fear a return to the days when LAWA is totally inward looking and out of touch with the outside world. Is it possible for LAWA to play us all into the future only to return to their past positions about runway movement, etc?

As I think about it, Omar wasn't at that meeting. I wonder if he wasn't invited? I wonder if there is a strategy afoot to split us all up?
